It's Over

Aimee Mann

Everything's beautiful Every day's a holiday The day you live without it Everything changes up Everything shifts and falls Unless you care about it

But you sit there in the darkness And you make plans but they're hopeless And you blame God when you're lonely And you'll call it fate When you show up too late and it's over

Here on the boulevard You were the golden boy A mix of brains and muscle That was a lucky break Luck is a thing you make Not just another hustle

But you sit there in the darkness And you make plans but they're hopeless And you blame God when you're lonely And you'll call it fate When you show up too late and it's over

'Cause nothing can wait forever They don't give unlimited chances in life They hand you the knife And tell you to cut it or run

So baby let's fly Baby let's run Baby let's run

'Cause everything's beautiful Every day's a holiday But days are getting shorter The moon and the stars report The boulevard's last resort And now your last supporter

But you sit there in the darkness And you make plans but they're hopeless And you blame God when you're lonely And you'll call it fate When you show up too late and it's over
