

Since You Stayed Here

Dionne Warwick

You'd never recognize the room
The pictures all
Have different frames now
And all the chairs
Are rearranged now
Somehow
I've thrown out every souvenir
Yes, there've been changes made
Since you stayed here

You'd never recognize the street
The neighbor's kids
Play different games now
The colors in the trees
Have changed now

Strange how
I've hardly thought of you this year
Yes, there've been changes made
Since you stayed here
The same address, well, more or less
More happens, less matters, I guess

You'd never recognize my life
The party givers know my name now
And when I cry it's not the same now
Somehow
I never waste a single tear
Yes, there've been changes made
Since you stayed here

You'd never recognize the room
You'd never recognize the room
