Bleed A River Deep

Ed Harcourt

When the clock strikes dead on midnight Books fly through the hall All the lampshades turn and rotate She walks through the wall

With hands in pockets I search for rockets That might light up the sky Have become more withdrawn since I was first born But I never know why

I see my body float like leaves Every day I want to breathe Rap my knuckles 'til they bleed A river deep

If I had sharp claws I'd get on all fours And scratch your back for free But it's been written, these nails are bitten I know what I could be

I see my body float like leaves Every day I want to breathe Rap my knuckles 'til they bleed A river deep
