

Remember when time was all we had?
No care for the sand in the hourglass
Each new night was another shot
To stake our claim on a parking lot
Remember when friends we're all we'd need?
Day followed the night and we'd let it lead
In the basement
On the pavement
We couldn't conceive of an end to it
But it's not like that anymore
Re-group, re-calculate
Rushing in was our first mistake
Re-think, re-calibrate
Set our sights on something bigger
(Maybe move on to better things)
Remember the pain of growing up?
It may have hurt but it sure was fun
It made us who we are now
It gave us a mystery to figure out
This is what we waited for
These days not much has changed
Except how we feel and what's at stake
But we are still the same
Should we chose to linger
Or move on to better things
