Viking Heart

Jane Siberry

Can you see who it might be? Tell old man to ring the bell Climb the steps up from the sea Strange and dark and very tall

Can you see who it might be?
Visitors - they are so few
Head so proud but curls so free
Looks like someone I once knew

David - of the Viking heart
Glitter of the sea
It couldn't
It wouldn't
It daren't be

The men they see him up the coast At the drinking house of Morley Arms Hails the sea with every toast and he hails the ladies with his charms

All the ladies he does love
Each day I saw his bosom swell
He's not like me - I love but one
And I love that one and I know him well

Ah - but all the love
In the world was not enough
So I couldn't
I wouldn't
I daren't say no

David - how you made me feel Every crack in every wall Climb above the traps of man Shout above the sirens call

But now the siren's all you hear Shamed and dizzy you can't stop All the things we used to fear Are you spinning - little top?

The strangeness of it all
Is you know yourself so well
But you couldn't
You wouldn't
You daren't say no

Signs of you - they disappeared Poems and candles - I don't need Flowers that you brought to me Fell into a book I never read

I cut my hair off like a man Too much trouble and what's more It was tarnished by your hand Gone my hair...into a drawer I said - should you leave?
and you - you just agreed so we couldn't we wouldn't we daren't say no

Now I have been a woman true taking all that life does send I thought I could love just you but the heart does sway and the body does bend

Tales of you sometimes they come I smile and nod quite naturally my thoughts so rarely to you run I watch the glitter of the sea

Can you see who it might be? tell old man to ring the bell climb the steps up from the sea I cannot see - I know him well

David of the Viking heart glitter of the sea it couldn't it wouldn't it daren't be
