The Art Of Love

Michael Franks

He had strong defenses built, His heart to surround Not for long, when she appeared All the walls tumbled down She had scars reminding her She was easily deceived Only tears convinced her Once again to believe His ego would bend Learning the art of love Her heart soon would mend Learning the art of love They were two hearts tuned together And beating as one Ever new, each kiss was like The very first one They explored each landscape Of their sweet intimacy Never bored, love's horizon reached out Infinitely Both lovers and friends Learning the art of love Homework never ends Learning the art of love Learning the art of love Requires some determination You search for the heart of love In every different situation You apply the art of love.