

Starts with a steady rhythm
Under a violent sky
Pounding of foreign heartbeat
Preparing to arrive

The heavens announced your presence
Nearly in our midst
That's when your steady pulses
Fell to silence...

Who will catch you if the engines fail?
Who will protect you if the train's derailed?
Who will revive you if your oxygen ceases?
Who will provide you with a new heartbeat?

The medicine men swept in
With their sad machines
We plead for answers
But were given none but these...

Beg heaven for intervention
She fell into abruption
Surgery's your only option
It's so desperate

Who will catch you if the engines fail?
Who will protect you if the train's derailed?
Who will revive you if your oxygen ceases?
Who will provide you with a new heartbeat?

Pictures replaying of your fragile limbs
Incubating...
But will you breathe again?
Will you breathe again?

You will catch me when the engines fail
You'll protect me when the train's derailed
You'll revive me when my oxygen ceases
You'll provide me with a new heartbeat

Your eyes beamed with a fight
And in that moment I knew
Tribulation is transformation
All hell can't prevent you