Never Enough

Raunchy

Resting between worlds seated at his throne Consuming the stars and all that dare surround him Soaked in the warmth of the sun As all below live subject to the night

And as they battle for the scraps that fall from his table Scraping the earth under their feet Wars are waged and never won

In vicious cycles around his endless hunger

Oh there will never be an end Oh 'cause there will never be enough

Self indulgent, deeply hell-bent To see his way to the bottom before moving on Gorging the food of the gods As all below live subject to the night And as they carry the weakened ones to safety Across the desolate land under their feet Wars are waged and never won

Oh there will never be an end Oh 'cause there will never be enough There's no way out Until the gods give up their heavens and he empties them out

A fleeting burst of light In the small blink of an eye Illuminating a path 'Cross a melancholy sky He followed with intent Mindful of his every step Passing by the hungry The ailing and the dead

Oh there will never be an end Oh 'cause there will never be enough There's no way out Until the gods give up their heavens and he empties them out
