Watching You Fall

There In the dark There's a child and she's waiting Lost in the maze of a fait accompli Is it a crime to be just hesitating While we're pretending that we never see

On a TV mounted on the wall From this distance I can see it all And I've been out here Watching you Watching you fall

Is there a trick to the art of not feeling Safe in our world while another's child bleeds Praying that God won't demand a redealing Of cards we have held and pretend you don't need

On a TV mounted on the wall From this distance I can see it all And I've been out here Watching you Watching you fall

Better not think about it In time we'll start to doubt it Christ has risen Keep him hidden God forbid he sees

It's not that we lack the vision Only just a quick decision Who will blame us Rules restrain us It's all in history

So close my eyes and pretend I am sleeping Avoiding the chance that you'll visit my dreams

On a TV mounted on the wall From this distance I can see it all And I've been out here Watching you fall Savatage
